Pronouns

Who does it, who gets it, and whose it is. In Latin America, ustedes is “you all” for everyone.

does it	it, him, her	to, for	my, your…
yo	me	me	mi
tú	te	te	tu
él, ella, usted	lo, la	le	su
nosotros, nosotras	nos	nos	nuestro, nuestra
ellos, ellas, ustedes	los, las	les	su

Te quiero.

I love you.

Lo veo.

I see it. (or: I see him.)

Le doy el libro.

I give him (or her) the book.

Se lo doy.

I give it to him (or her).

Quiero verte. · Te quiero ver.

I want to see you. (both are fine)

Tengo hambre.

I'm hungry. (no yo needed: the ending says who) usted is the polite “you” and takes the él forms: usted tiene. vosotros is used in Spain only, so Lector leaves it out.

Where they go: before a conjugated verb (te veo), or joined to the end of an infinitive, an -ndo form or a yes-command (verte, viéndote, mírame). Two in a row: le and les become se before lo, la, los, las: le + lo → se lo.

SOURCES

- RAE–ASALE, Nueva gramática básica de la lengua española (2011): personal pronouns; unstressed pronouns (clitics) and where they go.
- RAE–ASALE, Diccionario panhispánico de dudas (2005), entry “leísmo”: lo and la for direct objects, le and les for indirect objects.